Shimada Kai-ichirō-dan.
Length of reign in A-class, 5 years.

First of all is today.

He gathers up up and looked at some of his kafa box

If I don't win today, nothing gets started.

There's nothing to grasp onto.

He can't find any special motivations—

Strategies he's good at or things he's bad at.

子供将棋教室

I saw him when he came as a lecturer for a children's shogi tournament when I was in elementary school.

I'd been winning and progressing to the final round, so I could only see him from far away. He didn't leave much of an impression on me, though.

He was terribly thin and very tall... a quiet person.

He had played a game here before.

That's that, right?

But—

I'm not good with them.

My games with those kinds of people get really long.

Rather than playing as "win" shogi,

he's a person who plays refusing to "lose" shogi.

GOTOU SAID IT TO ME NOT LONG AGO

Be calm...

I mustn't get nervous

Go! I should win this.

NOTE: In the anime, Gouken is shown to be somewhat more of a person with a "childlike" attitude, a "strong" person, although not very "strong".

In the match,
I got black,
and made an Anko's triforce.

I cannot lose here.

No matter what

Here
we go.

Now,
the war begins.

It's been all standard play so far.

Then—

when did I start defending?

-So,

I was supposed to be attacking.

How did it get this bad?

What is this?

Shit.

Don't not...
Have any moves left...!!

I didn't
make any mistakes.
I'm sure I didn't.

So what? How did this become so serious?

SO YOU FINALLY LOOKED THIS WAY, HEH?
